MEMORANDUM ON

CLASSIFICATION

IN THE

NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY.

BY

J. S. BILLINGS, Director.

January 1, 1899.

The books of the New York Public Library may be divided into three great groups for classification purposes.

The first group includes the special collections, the books in the open reference department, and the books in certain special departments, most of which are to have special reading rooms in which the books are to be made as accessible as possible to scholars and investigators. The classes in this group are known as the star classes, because the books in them are marked by a star (*) followed by one or more letters of the alphabet.

The second group includes the reference books which are to be placed in the stacks, and these are divided into fourteen classes, namely, Biography, History, Geography, Art, Literature, Science, Philology, Sociology, Economics, Technology, Law, Philosophy, Religion and Medicine.

The third group will include the books of the lending department when this is established.

The main principle kept in view in the classification is the convenience of the readers in the library, including both those who are allowed access to the shelves and those to whom books are delivered in the general reading rooms, and in endeavoring to provide for this convenience we have relied on the experience gained with our own readers as to what books or groups of books are most frequently called for. The books relating to the subjects which are most studied by our visitors we wish to have either on the open reference shelves or near the delivery desk, while those that are rarely called for may be placed in the stack at a greater distance. The relative importance of different subjects as they would appear in a scheme of the divisions of human knowledge has, therefore, very little weight in our classification.

The second principle which governs the classification is the fact that in our new building special accommodations are to be provided for readers engaged in the study of certain special subjects, for which purpose the books relating to those subjects are to be placed in special rooms, to which access will be given by admittance cards. These books can be obtained for the use of readers in the general reading rooms, but they will be mainly used by specialists, and the wants of these specialists will be chiefly considered in the classification. For example, we shall have a room devoted to Hebrew literature and to books about the Jews, and in this room will be placed the books on the Jewish religion, as well as those relating to poetry, history, etc.

Near this room will be another containing our collection of Bibles—which is a very large one—and in another room near by will be placed our collection of Orientalia, including Philology, History, Literature, and Oriental religions, with the exception of Christianity and Judaism.

Hence, in that part of the stacks which is devoted to literature, the Oriental and Hebrew literature will not be found.

For a similar reason works on the Hebrew language are placed with the Jewish collection, books on the Scandinavian languages are placed with Scandinavian literature, on Russian with Russian literature, etc.

On the other hand, for certain languages which have little or no literature, except translations, these translations are commonly placed with the books on the language in the department of Philology. For example, a copy of the Gospel of St. Matthew in Choctaw goes with the books in the Choctaw language, and not with Bibles. An exception to this rule may be made in the case of certain special collections; for example, a work on music in Choctaw would go to the special collection on Music, and a translation of Shakespeare into Cherokee, Arabic or Hebrew, would go to the Shakespeare collection primarily.

In assigning a book to a place upon the shelves two questions often come up: first, in what class does it belong by its main subject? second, in what class will it probably be most useful in this particular library? For example, one of the special collections of this library is that which pertains to American history, and it seems best to place in this collection in proper chronological order a considerable number of sermons and controversial tracts which, from their main subject, would go into the department of Theology, but which would probably never be consulted by the readers in that department. In like manner there are some poems which do not go to the department of literature, but to that of history, being of the nature of political satires.

The location to which a book is to be assigned is a relative location; that is to say, it is assigned to a particular class and not to a particular shelf. The marks on a book to indicate the class to which they belong, with the corresponding marks on the shelves to indicate the classes occupying them, are combinations of letters, usually three in number, prefixed by a star (*) in the so-called star classes. Probably in the future one or two other special prefix marks will be used.

In the regular series of classification the first group—Biography—is indicated by the letter A, and includes works on Genealogy and Heraldry. The chief interest of the majority of individual biographies is in connection with the political history or social condition of a particular country, or with some particular subject in Art, Literature or Science, and therefore there are good reasons for shelving such biographies with History, Art, etc. What is done in this library is to shelve the biographies of Emperors, Kings and other rulers with the history of their respective countries; the biographies of Musicians with Music, and of Artists with Art, while all other individual biographies are shelved together in alphabetical order, because they can thus be found and delivered most quickly. But in the case of special collections the special collection takes precedence—thus, a biography of Milton goes to the special Milton collection.

The second main group in our classification is History. The History of Ancient Egypt, Assyria and Babylonia, of India and Persia and of the Arabs and Turks goes into the star O (*O) group with the language and literature of those Oriental peoples, and the history of the Jews goes to the Hebrew collection, *P.

Works relating to general or universal history form the group BA, which is subdivided into—

Periodicals	BAA
Dictionaries	BAB
Collections	BAC
Ancient History	BAE
Modern History	BAF
Chronology	BAH
Atlases, Charts	BAI
Philosophy and Science of History	BAL
Methods of	BAM
History of Civilization	BAP

This leaves fourteen sets of three letter signs beginning "BA," which are not yet applied and are available for further subdivisions.

The letter signs BB to BS are to be applied to those histories of Asia, Africa and Australasian Islands, which do not go to the special star groups.

General and Miscellaneous Notes.

THE CLASS FOR MISCELLANEOUS WORKS IN EACH GROUP OF CLASSES, is used for subjects which are not specifically provided for and are not related to any other class in the group. If there is no miscellaneous class, such subjects go to the most general class of the group.

THE CLASS FOR PERIODICALS AND SOCIETY PUBLICATIONS IN EACH GROUP OF CLASSES, includes, unless otherwise provided for, the publications of congresses and conferences (even when catalogued as closed entries) serial documents, and series of monographs. It also includes periodicals, etc., on any subject falling in one of the classes of the group, unless that class has a separate subclass for periodicals or has already taken periodicals.

ALL COPIES OR EDITIONS OF A WORK go to the same class. Copies or editions which might go to two or more classes may be scattered, provided that the several classes are not all in the stacks or all in the same division. For example, all copies of a work, which might go either to THI or to TLS (both stack classes), to TAA or TLG (both Economics Room classes), are kept together in the class chosen. Copies of a work which might go either to IDS (American History room class) or SACB (stack class), to MOF (Art room class) or to VEN (Technology room class), may be scattered. Copies or editions of general reference books, such as encyclopedias, biographical dictionaries, etc., are frequently scattered among the several divisions and rooms.

A MONOGRAPH SERIES IS KEPT TOGETHER OR SCATTERED on the following principles: An unnumbered series is scattered; a numbered series is usually kept together, if it is on a definite subject and if the Library will acquire the complete series but an ART Division series is usually scattered even if numbered. An unanalyzed or partly analyzed series is kept together; if the subject matter is very miscellaneous, such a series is classed in *CA. Subseries, if catalogued as such, are kept together or scattered on the same principle, but the several subseries are preferably not kept in the same class.

WHEN THE VOLUMES OF A PERIODICAL OR OF A SERIES ARE IN DIFFERENT ROOMS OR CLASSES, the first classmark on the card gives the latest location, the second the next to the latest, and so on. For example, *R-Room 228 & TGA means that the latest issue or issues are in *R-Room 228 and the earlier in TGA.

MAPS are classed in the Map Room, but maps that go with a book, a set, or a series are classed with the latter. Maps of the latter class are bound in the books are bound as separate volumes. If the volumes seem to be in danger of mutilation, they are marked with the caution sign.

UNBOUND PAMPHLETS of one hundred pages or less are classified in a restricted schedule of classes and are bound into pamphlet volumes. One hundred pages are not the maximum limit; they are merely a norm of the thickness, determining the classification of a pamphlet as a separate or in a pamphlet volume. Hence pamphlets of more than one hundred pages may often go to pamphlet volume classes. Pamphlets which are Broadsides.

Broadsides up to 10" by 14" take no oversize symbol; from 10"x14" to 18"x24", ++; from 18"x24" on, +++. These are the measurements for the space to be occupied by the broadside. If the broadside is already folded and no harm is done, it can go into the smaller size folder.

catalogued as open entries which are classed in Reserve or in the A classes in genealogy, which are particularly valuable, or which are too poor to bind even in a *C pamphlet volume, are always classed as separates. A classmark not in the restricted schedule may be used if at any time enough pamphlets are at hand belonging to the corresponding class.

BROADSIDES, regardless of subject, go to Reserve.

UNBOUND AND UNCATALOGUED PAMPHLETS (NCS) are classified in a restricted schedule of classes, but the schedule is wider in scope than the pamphlet volume schedule. As with catalogued pamphlets and for the same reasons, a classmark not in the restricted class may be used.

THE SYMBOLS FOR OVERSIZE BOOKS CROSSES BELOW THE CLASSMARK- are used as follows:

	Room 308	Room 313	Room 328	Stacks and All Other Rooms
+	over 11½ in. high	over 11½ in.high	over 12½ in.high	over 11½ in.high or long
++	" 16 " "	" 16 " "	None	None
+++	" 22 " "	" 21 " "	19 " "	19 in. high or long
++++	" None	" 30 " "	None	None

Art and Print Room books, when transferred to the stacks, take the stack sizes. Genealogy and local history books in stack 7 take the Room 328 sizes. All pamphlets over 10½ inches high, if classed in p.v.classes, take one cross. Individual works, periodicals, serials, and series the volumes of which vary in size are treated as follows: The general rule is to keep titles together in one size. New titles, and old titles when or if recatalogued or reclassified, go to the larger size. Individual works are scattered, if the larger size goes to the three cross shelves.

A CAUTION SIGN is placed on the fly-leaf and on the back of a book, but not on cards to indicate that the book is to be read under supervision. A caution sign is placed on the back of a pamphlet volume to indicate that, if and when the volume is rebound, some pamphlet therein is wanted for reclassification as a separate, with a series or in Reserve; the shelf list card of the pamphlet is stamped accordingly.

CAGE BOOKS ARE CLASSED IN  6,8 or 9 as follows:

Books in 6,8 or 9 have the regular classmarks preceded by the respective numerals, ~~but SNY is shelved in the 6 cage without the numeral~~. The caution sign is sometimes used for books in 6,8 or 9, as an additional precaution.

Books restricted because of the nature of the book; these have no cards in any public catalogue.

6 Books requiring supervision both of the book and of the reader; normally these have author cards only in the public catalogues.

8 Books requiring a selection of readers from the point of view of the use of the book, e.g., textbooks, popular fiction, English translations of foreign clasics, books too poor to bind, etc. These books have cards in the supplementary catalogues. The numeral 8 should be stamped on and traced for all cards that are filed in the supplementary catalogues; if no 8 precedes the classmark, the books are in their usual location.

9 Books shelved in the 8 cage but with cards in the public catalogues, border line Reserve items, limited editions and other works not likely to be abused or misused, but requiring some control as regards issue and some supervision to protect the book.

*R BOOKS IN THE MAIN READING ROOM occasionally take classmarks that differ from the corresponding classes in the stacks or in the divisions. Such books, when transferred to the stacks or to the divisions, are to be located in the stack or division class.

The word desk, when it precedes a room number, is omitted in the case of reference books that class successively in different rooms or divisions.

THE FUND FROM WHICH A BOOK IS PURCHASED does not necessarily determine its location in a given class or division, except that all books bought from the Drexel Fund go to the Drexel Collection of the Music Division. A gift collection, donated with the understanding that it be kept together, or any other special collection which it is desifed to keep together, is classified in one of two ways: (1) a new class is established in a related group of classes and is reserved for the collection and for that collection alone e.g., NADB for the Spingarn Collection, or (2) a new class is established for special collections and each special collection in the class has the name of the donor or some other name associated with the collection as a keyword below the classmark, e.g., SBA
(Wells)

12 5 44

Upon this classification it may be remarked that it is not a copy of any classification used elsewhere; that it is not specially original; that it is not logical so far as the succession of different departments in relation to the operations of the human mind is concerned; that it is not recommended for any other library, and that no librarian of another library would approve of it. As to the system of marking it is not mnemonic, and its chief recommendation is that it indicates the classes with a comparatively small number of signs. By its means books in the library are divided into about 12,000 groups, with an average of less than forty (40) books in each group, and the average number of letters in the mark for each of these 12,000 groups is three. Where more minute classification proves desirable another letter can be added; four-letter groups would give us 250,000 groups. I do not think, however, that such close classification is desirable in the majority of the departments; it is most useful in the industrial arts, and least useful in history, literature and science, in which last department the periodical literature is of special importance.

The use of figures is reserved for marking the lending department when this is established, and for marking the local position of each book in its own class.

The sequence of the subdivisions of "general works" in each section is generally as follows:

1. Works on the subject. General works.
2. Periodicals. Societies.
3. Government reports (Series).
4. History. Bibliography.
5. Dictionaries.
6. Manuals. Systematic works.
7. Collections.
8. Essays. Miscellany.

Then come the special topics.

Before this rule was decided upon, however, some of the sections (such as C, portions of S and T) had already been arranged, so that there is a slight discrepancy here. It is the intention to bring these few sections into line with the rest of the classification in this respect.

SLAVONIC COLLECTION.

A. This collection includes:

(1) All works in any Balto-Slavonic language on whatever subject. Exceptions: Works on the Jews are classed in the Jewish Division; ~~works on Oriental subjects, including the Turko-Tataric and Caucasian languages of Russia, are classed in the Oriental Division~~; works on music in which the score is more important than the text are classed in the Music Division; Works on the American Indians are classed in HB-HBS; documents, excepting those in Russian, Ukrainian, Bulgarian, and Serbian, are classed according to the general classification scheme.

N.B. - Documents the text of which is in one of the last mentioned languages and in another tongue are also classed according to the general classification scheme.

(2) All translations from Balto-Slavonic belles-lettres. For all such translations, two stars are to be used in the classmark instead of one; except for translations into another Balto-Slavonic language.

(3) All works in any non-Balto-Slavonic language on Balto-Slavonic philology and belles-lettres. All other works in a non-Balto-Slavonic tongue on a Balto-Slavonic subject are classed according to subject in the general classification scheme. Examples: A book in English on Russian history goes to GL - GM; on Russian economic conditions, to TAH.

B. In each linguistic or national group within the Slavonic collection, a work in a Balto-Slavonic tongue is to be classed according to subject, when the work is on a Balto-Slavonic subject; according to language, when the work is on a non-Balto-Slavonic subject. Translations of drama, fiction, poetry, etc., from one Balto-Slavonic language into another are classed with the language of the translation. Examples: A book in Russian on Russian history goes to *QG; on Polish history, to *QR; on American history, to *QG; a Russian novel translated into Serbian to *QKK.

Exceptions: *QA, *QAC, *QAD, *QB, and *QZ.

C. Reserve books in the Slavonic Division are marked Slavonic reserve, taking no other classmark.)

BIBLE.

Note: Bibles and Biblical literature in the Hebrew, Oriental and Balto Slavonic languages go to the corresponding Divisions of the Library. African (Negro), Indian (American) and Oceanic versions are classified with the languages. Texts of the Old Testament if designed for Jewish readers, to the Jewish Division. Works about the Old Testament, if of a distinctly Christian devotional character, are classed in *X; other works preferably in the Jewish Division. The Bible and Assyriology, Egyplology, etc to the Oriental Division.

Works about a society are keyworded under its name; publications of the society are so keyworded if not entered under its name. Observe the following peculiarities:

Works about and all publications of a society the name of which begins with a word or phrase such as Order, Society, Colonial Order, National Society, take the first adjective or noun following as a keyword: The following societies take a compound keyword:

Name of Society.	Keyword.
National Society of the Colonial Dames of America.	(Colonial Dames)
National Society of United States Daughters of 1812.	(United States Daughters)
Order of Colonial Lords of Manors in America.	(Colonial Lords)
Society of Colonial Daughters of the Seventeenth Century	(Colonial Daughters)
Society of Colonial Wars	(Colonial Wars)
Society of Daughters of Holland Dames, Descendants of the Ancient and Honorable Families of New Netherlands	(Daughters of Holland Dames)
Society of the Second War with Great Britain in the State of New York	(War with Great Britain)

Works about the following societies and publications if not entered under the name of the society, take an abbreviated keyword:

Name of Society.	Keyword.
Daughters of the American Revolution	(D.A.R.)
Daughters of the Revolution	(D.R.)
Sons of the American Revolution	(S.A.R.)
Sons of the Revolution	(S.R.)

DESCRIPTION AND TRAVEL in a particular country or continent to history classes; but guidebooks to geography, excepting locals in the United States and in the British Isles and excepting Paris. Automobile guidebooks, to Map Room. Views, to history classes.

TRAVEL AMONG PRIMITIVE PEOPLES if concerned mainly with social life, to QO-QP classes. American Indians, however, to HB classes.

SCIENTIFIC DESCRIPTIONS OF FOLK LIFE and customs also to QO-QP classes.

SOCIAL LIFE, with the exceptions noted above, to SBC if treated in a general way; to history classes, if restricted to particular countries.

SOCIAL CONDITIONS TO SAC-SACB; frequently, however, to history classes. Surveys, studies of social problems, works published by sociological institutions, etc., to SAC-SACB. Travellers' accounts of social conditions usually to history. When in doubt, classify in history.

DIPLOMACY, in the narrow sense, international arbitration, and treaties, to XB classes. Other phases of foreign relations, usually to history classes. Relations between an American nation and a non-American, to the former; between the United States and another nation, to the United States; between two nations not included in the above, to the nation of the author of the work in hand.

NATIONALS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES, to the country of residence; if there is more than one country of residence, to the country of origin, e.g., Germans in the United States, to IEK; Germans in foreign countries, to EAH.Cf.SEV.

HUNTING TRIPS, to MY classes.
